Trace the ancient boundary of Offa's Dyke Path, a 283km (177 mile) National Trail along Britain's longest ancient monument - the 8th-century earthwork separating England and Wales. The trail unfolds through diverse border landscapes, from the dramatic Wye Gorge and Tintern Abbey near Chepstow, across the remote Black Mountains and Hergest Ridge, to the industrial heritage of the Clwydian Range and the seaside finish at Prestatyn.

This trail map charts the Offa's Dyke Path from south to north and offers walkers of all abilities the chance to explore limestone gorges, mountain ridges, and borderland heritage over 12-14 days. Providing precise route-line mapping, it ensures you can follow Offa's ancient frontier with total confidence.

- 1:25,000 OS trail map with Ordnance Survey Explorer map legend
- Shows the full 177-mile (283km) route of the Offa's Dyke Path
- Route divided into 12 clearly defined stages of 17-29km (11-18 miles) with route stats for walking the trail in either direction
- Downloadable GPX files for easy navigation using GPS devices or smartphone apps
- Available with the Cicerone guidebook Offa's Dyke Path or as a separate, standalone purchase

With expert guidance from author Mike Dunn, discover the timeless allure of Britain's borderlands, where every ridge reveals panoramic views, ancient history, and the quiet satisfaction of completing one of the National Trails.
